Kauffman plans 6th annual festival

Kauffman Center Announces 6th Annual Future Stages Festival

Free festival featuring over 650 youth performers to be held at the Kauffman Center this June

Kansas City, MO – Kauffman Center for the Performing Arts is excited to announce the 6th annual free Future Stages Festival on Sunday, June 16, 2019, from 11 a.m. – 4 p.m., continuing the tradition of celebrating Kansas City youth and the arts.

As part of the Kauffman Center's Open Doors Spotlight on Youth program, the festival invites youth and community arts organizations to perform and celebrate the arts. Performers representing a wide range of cultures from the greater KC Metro area fill the Kauffman Center stages, lobby, and lawn each year during the festival.

More than 3,000 youth performers from 60 community groups have been showcased since the event's inception in 2014. The 6th festival aims to feature more performance groups and provide several new engagements and arts activities for festival guests.

"Future Stages Festival provides the opportunity for young people to experience performing on the same stages as the national and international talent that grace the Kauffman Center stages," said Paul Schofer, Kauffman Center's President and CEO. "Kauffman Center is thrilled to present Future Stages Festival as a free event to encourage all to experience the talents of the next generation of performing artists in our community.”
