Great Actors. Smart Plays.

You're Invited to a Free Staged Reading of "Observe the Sons of Ulster Marching Towards the Somme" at the National WWI Museum and Memorial

We're happy to announce a free staged reading of Frank McGuinness's World War I-era play, "Observe the Sons of Ulster Marching Towards the Somme" at the National World War I Museum and Memorial on Sunday, March 18th at 2 pm. You're invited to this riveting and lyrical memory play, which follows a group of Irish Protestant volunteers from innocence to tragedy on the fields of World War I France.

The reading will feature a cast of Kansas City actors at the National World War I Museum and Memorial under the direction of Cinnamon Schultz. This event is free, but a reservation is required. RSVP to Matt Sameck, KCAT Director of Marketing and Development, by using the button below or by calling 816-361-5228. Please be sure to note your complete name, the number of people in your party, and a contact number or e-mail. Act quickly, as space is limited.
